

Wimbledon estate agents, Brinkley's welcomes the new Government scheme.

Brinkley's Estate Agents, which has branches in Putney, Wimbledon Hill and Wimbledon Park, says the new proposals, which could see house deposits fall to as little as 5 per cent can only be a good thing.

"Although some agencies in the UK are suggesting that it is unemployment that is the real barrier to people getting on the property ladder, it is nonetheless a step in the right direction", said Robert Brinkley, Managing Director of Brinkley's Estate Agency Ltd.

"Even before the Government announcement, our offices were experiencing a rush of house-hunters wanting to buy in SW London".

While the economy remains unstable there will always be uncertainties; whether to wait for a complete recovery or to buy now. The reduction of the necessary deposit is set to help first time buyers a great deal and Brinkleys have knowledgeable sales negotiators in every branch, who are perfectly placed to offer advice and help customers find their ideal property.

Brinkley's Estate Agents is finding that prices in SW London have remained relatively stable over the last few years, making it a good place to begin ascending the property ladder.
